LC State faculty, staff and students:

Idaho Gov. Brad Little announced this morning that he is extending his statewide stay-home order through April 30. The order is intended to continue the progress made toward slowing the spread of coronavirus (COVID-19).

Due to LC State's transition to remote learning and working in March, the order will have little impact on the college's current operations.

Students: LC State will continue with remote learning through the semester and maintain the same precautions, operations and adherence to the order as demonstrated over the past few weeks. Plan to complete your final exams through remote means – your instructors will provide details for each course. Administrators are pleased to announce that a virtual commencement ceremony will air on Friday, May 15, at 2 p.m. Details are forthcoming.

Employees: We will maintain the same precautions, operations and adherence to the order as demonstrated over the past few weeks, at least through the April 30 stay-home order timeline. Assuming the order is not further extended, LC State leadership is working on a phased transition plan to be implemented over weeks and months to gradually reopen campus over the summer as it becomes safe to do so. There should be no expectation of a rapid reopening event. Further details will be shared during the May 1 virtual campus meeting. In the meantime, supervisors are tasked with working with employees to ensure meaningful remote or essential work, appropriate leave coding, and/or reassignment options are implemented.

Additional updates and information will be distributed through email and posted at www.lcsc.edu/coronavirus.
